

Giving advice

The expressions shouldn't + base form of the verb, and what about + ing form of the verb, can be used to give advice. We don't add an s when we use should in the third person because it's a modal verb. So we can say:

He/She should exercise regularly.

You should speak to your parents.

What about organizing free evenings?

Task 1: Complete the following pieces of advice.

1. A: My math results are very bad.

B: What about _____ (study) together for the next exam?

2. A: I would like to buy that CD, but I don't have money.

B: You _____ (save) the money your parents give you on weekends.

3. A: Peter is always tired in the morning.

B: He _____ (stay up) so late.

4. A: I don't want to take piano lessons but my parents insist on it.

B: You _____ (take) a few lessons? You might like them!

5. A: You _____ (tell) Sandra you aren't going to the party.

B: I know, but she's going to be angry with me.

6. A: I have a headache!

B: You _____ (sit) so close to the TV.
