

Expressing likes and dislikes

We can use the verbs like, love and hate to express different degrees of preference.

I like to jog/jogging.

They love music.

She hates to paint/painting.

We can use don't like with the subjects I, you, we, you and they, and doesn't like with the subjects he, she and it, to express dislikes.

Task 1: Complete the sentences using the verbs in parentheses.

1. John _____ play soccer. (like)
2. Sophia and Mel _____ baseball. (hate)
3. Luisa _____ extreme sports. (not like)
4. Clark _____ watching sports on TV. (love)

Task 2: Match the sentence halves.

1. I love traveling, and I'd love to ...	a. to eat?
2. I really hate getting...	b. hate it too?
3. What would you like...	c. She loves it.
4. Marion doesn't like ...	d. up early on Monday mornings.
5. Sam hates boxing. Do you...	e. to visit Brazil.
6. Does she like dancing?	f. seafood at all.

Task 3: Complete the dialogue with words or phrases from the box.

hate don't like Do you like like love

Susan: What about you, Mike? _____ romantic movies?

Mike: No, that's not for me I _____ them. I _____ horror movies, but you know, what I really enjoy is watching soccer games. I _____ soccer.

Susan: Oh! Please don't start talking about soccer. I _____ like soccer at all.